

Alan Black, P.E.

Alan grew up in Harris County, and after graduating from Georgia Tech he returned to Houston to work as a private civil engineering consultant, designing and managing primarily public works projects. After 13 years as a private consultant, he moved to Harris County Flood Control District in 2008, starting first as a project manager, and has since guided engineering design projects at the Department and Division levels. Today Alan serves as the Director of Operations, with oversight of the planning, engineering, construction and maintenance of all Harris County Flood Control District projects.
